با توجه به متن به پرسش‌ها پاسخ دهید.

All living things, plants and animals, are made up of water.

When you play, or even breathe, your body loses water. This must be replaced. When your brain discovers that your body has lost water, it sends signals to your mouth and throat, which start to feel dry and then you feel thirsty. An adult human body contains about five liters of blood, of which three liters are water. No matter how thirsty you feel or how much water you drink, the amount of water in your blood remain the same. Every day, an adult drink about two liters of water, the body gets another liter through food, vegetables, eggs and even meat.

47. If you drink more water, the amount of water will be the same in your blood. F T
